Students that do not have an unusual circumstance and are unable to provide parental information normally do not qualify for federal aid. However, in situations where your parent refuses to provide his or her information on the FAFSA or refuses to provide you with any financial support, there is an exception that allows a student to submit the FAFSA without parental information and receive a Direct Unsubsidized Loan only.

Please provide the following information so your financial aid administrator may determine whether you may only borrow a Direct Unsubsidized Loan, if you are otherwise eligible for the loan. You may be asked for additional documentation depending on your individual situation.

By signing this worksheet, you certify that all of the information you will give is complete and correct and that you are requesting an unsubsidized loan only, subject to dependent loan limits for your grade level. Please sign this form in ink. We are unable to accept e-signed documents.

Your answers above may indicate an unusual circumstance. The reason we ask is to try and determine if you could qualify for a dependency override, despite that you didn't answer your FAFSA that way. If you think that you have an unusual circumstance, please consider submitting an unusual circumstance appeal. Otherwise, we just need your parent's signed statement for your Direct Unsubsidized Loan.
