Exhibit titled “Latino Roots in Oregon” is currently displayed in the Hoke Main Lounge. The display includes fifteen panels containing photographs and stories about seven immigrant families in Oregon. The Latino Roots panels feature a timeline of Latino presence in what is now the state of Oregon, beginning in the 1700s, maps, demographic information, information about Latino youth, and the stories of seven families who came at different times to Lane County from California, Texas, Mexico, Guatemala, El Salvador, and Chile.

The Latino Roots Project is administered through the Center for Latino (a) and Latin American Studies and is a part of the “Americas in a Globalized World: Linking Diversity and Internationalization” at the University of Oregon.
